VIRGINIA TO RECEIVE $383,000 IN WILDLIFE RESTORATION FEDERAL FUND

Virginia's share of the federal Pittman-Robertson and the Dingell-Johnson Act funds for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1960, wil be $382,223, some $22,268 less than the state's 1959 fiscal year federal aid the state game commission reports.

The Virginia apportionment, collected by the U. S. Treasury from excise taxes on sales of hunting and fishing equipment throught the U. S. amounts to $31,724 for fish work and $300,999 for game work, compared with last year's fiscal year's $77,320 and $327,671 apportionments for fish and game respectively, the commission said.

The five-and-a-half ped cent decrease was attributed to a slight drop in excise tax collections and a large increase in the amount apportioned to Alaska.

Virginia received its 1960 apportionment from a total of $20,612,778 on the basis of a formula that considers the area of the state and the total number of licenses sold. Under the terms of the federal aid acts, approved projects are conducted with state funds and the state commission is then reimbursed for 75 per cent of the cost of each project fromthe Federal Wildlife Restoration Fund.

SHENANDOAH RIVER HIT BY POISONING AGAIN

State game commission and water control board officials are jointly investigating what looks like a repeat performance of last winter's disastrous fish kill in the Shenandoah River below Front Royal, game commission fish division assistant chief R. F. Martin reports.

Warren County's state game warden, J. W. Simpson, found hundreds of minnows and small bass dead on "Bennie's Bench," on December 7, and dead fish have been seen from industrial outfall at Front Royal to White Horse Park, 15 miles below the industrial plant, Martin said.

Millions of fish were poisoned in the same stretch of the Shenandoah last winter, but the streams had made a good recovery during the summer and native fish from feeder streams were repopulating it until the new poisoning began, he stated.

FIVE EIK BAGGED DURING VIRGINIA'S 1959 SEASON

Five bull elk were taken in Giles County during Virginia's three-day elk season last November 16-18, the Giles County state game warden, W. T. Jamerson, reports.

Fewer hunters was the reason he gave for the drop from the elk kill of 12 recorded during the 1958 season.

Although there may be only 200 elk in Virginia, a bull-only season will not hurt the herd, he said.

Male and female elk are born in equal numbers, he said. But fewer adult males are needed because Elk are polygamous, with old males dominating "harems" and mating with several females, he explained.

Successful elk hunters, all of whom used rifles, were J. K. King, of Pulaski (12 points); J. J. Smith, Jr., of Bristol (4 points); Ted Somerville, of Atlanta, Ga. (12 points); Ernest Ward, of Narrows (spike); and Banner Wells, of Big Stone Gap (11 points).

BOB-CATS IN CRAIG CO.

Sight records of "long tailed bobcats" have been recorded in Virginia from time to time, the most recent report being from Craig County. But scientists have never seen one they could examine. Anyone seeing a wild cat slightly smaller than a bobcat but with a tail two-thirds as long as its body is asked to send details on the place and date of the sighting and a description of the animal to Route 1, Box 309C, Covington, Va. A reward will be given for a specimen of the animal.

STAMP IS REQUIRED

The one-dollar stamp to hunt, fish and trap on national forestes in Virginia is required to hunt on the 2,700-acree Lee Experimental Forest which is located south of Buckingha mCourt House in Buckingham County, as well as on the George Washington and the Jefferson National Forests.

FATE
